JUDGE LaBUY SAYS THERE WAS NO EVIDENCE AGAINST OHM

Policeman William H. Ohm, of the Desplaines street station, who was accused by bandits of having profited in some of their robberies, was released today by Judge LaBuy, sitting in the Maxwell street court.

LaBuy said that there was no evidence to show that Ohm had anything to do with the robberies, and that he was surprised that the charges against Ohm had been brought into court.

Ohm says that he will sue Police Captain Barney Baer for $10,000 for libel and false arrest. Baer's men arrested Ohm after the bandits had made statements implicating him.

The night after the newspapers made a sensation of the Ohm case, Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler humiliated him by calling him before him, stripping him* of his star and buttons with the seal of Chicago on them and calling him a liar.
